A wooden armchair with colorful patterned cushions is the central focus. The cushions feature a vibrant geometric pattern in shades of pink, blue, and white. The chair is set in a lush garden with green foliage and bamboo in the background. To the right, a glass of beer sits on a wooden stump, next to a bottle of beer. The overall scene is a bohemian outdoor setting.

A photograph of three decorative pillows stacked on a light-colored stone ledge. The top pillow has a complex geometric pattern in teal, gold, and white. The middle pillow is a solid, vibrant teal color. The bottom pillow is a plain, light beige or cream color. The background is a dense, out-of-focus green hedge. On the left side, a portion of a fourth pillow with a similar pattern to the top one is visible, resting on the ledge. The overall scene is bright and natural, suggesting an outdoor setting.

FINE ARTS
LEISURE

The Other Sides Of Seuss

So Ho has recently become the talk of the town for some extraordinary tapestries, including the Tuffed Cities and the Two-Faced Drabberhouse. The fine Cities Alphabet and the Andulowen Cracker. These old and new, some illustrated from a children's book in upstate New York, have hardly ever been glimpsed in Manhattan or, for that matter, anywhere else. And to think that I saw them on Orange Street.

Such wild creatures originated in a remote far-distant continent but by the imagination of Theodor Seuss Geisel, better known as Dr. Seuss. Carved in wood, these last sculptures are in "The Art of Dr. Seuss," a show at the Metropolitan Gallery.

Dr. Seuss the sculptor? This illustration features Dr. Seuss the author, a long genius, of Seuss the magazine editor, Dr. Seuss the publisher.

successful. I think he didn't dare to expose himself as a fine artist.

An example of his self-effacement is "Man Who Made an Unwise Purchase," a colorful painting of a child in a yellow dress following a large yellow dog. The artist has a sense of humor about
